Opinion piece: BEST BISCUITS EVER!

By Sofia

I am eating one right now. I kinda feel bad for my keyboard, because there are lots ofcrumbs on it. The name is LOTUS BISCOFF. I love them. They're caramelly and very very tasty. The ingredients list is long enough to pass as a fairytale. The priceis borderline scandalous, and the aggressively red and white packaging is a art form!

World Cup results

By Tulisa

Right, so I know not everyone is happy after our match against Argentina who cheated their way into wining and as it was Messi's favourite referee he was siding with them.This was also because Argentina wanted to be the second country to win the world cup 2 times in a row but luckily for England after 2 hours of football Spain won 1-0 to win the world cup and add a second star to their shirts.

Argentina did cheat in the Spain game, as well as other in the World Cup by pushing people over sliding into people on purpose anything to win the games they were devastated after there 1-0 loss to Spain in the final!

Lego

by Edward

The founder of LEGO was a man called Ole Kirk Kristiansen he was a normal carpenter and one day he thought of making wooden toys and so he began. One of his first toys was a small wooden duck. Unfortunately, in 1932 just after Ole had launched the toy idea he knocked over a lit lantern and it smashed on the floor resulting in the flame escaping and setting fire to the building . Thankfully Ole escaped with minimal injures. Once he had recovered he was overloaded with orders so he employed a team of seven to help him with!

This event repeated itself two more times luckily there were no high level casualties.

LEGO was originally from DENMARK and the main headquarters is currently based there. There is one major attraction in Denmark - It is an interactive experience with four different zones and the most exclusive LEGO store in the world as on a daily basis the designer will come in and sign some of the sets that they have made attractions in Billund . Mini-chef is an exclusive restaurant where LEGO robots will serve your food and will cook it too . You have to use your bag of LEGO to put in your order on a special computer. Check it out!

2028 Olympics

By Paul

The Olympics are not underway yet but i am very excited as we may be seeing some new additions ... cricket and breakdancing! To add to it, it is set to be in America, and the stadiums should create a brilliant atmosphere. Here are some images of the various stadiums that will be used. Swimming is always one of the most viewed sports with beautiful stadiums along with football.

House Competitions

By Steph

Dr Walker has recently launched a house competition about using AI responsibly at Wyvern. The main point of AI is not to replace your leaning but to use it as a tool to aid your learning. If you use AI for schoolwork at Wyvern, it will likely be a C3 for misuse of IT.
Using AI for coursework or NEA could result in DISQUALIFICATION from the exam course. So, the point of this house competition is to create a poster to help show how to effectively use AI. The overall point of school is to learn, and you don't learn anything using AI.
There are house points for every entry, and the winner will get a prize and their poster shown around school If making posters is not your thing, you could participate in other house competitions.
For example, the DT unnecessary inventions house competition where you need to create the best invention to stop coins from falling down the sofa. You can present this in anyway you want it closes on the 6th of November. Also, any keen photographers can also participate in the geography photography competition. Where you can take a photo of human, physical and environmental geography in the local area. The due date for was the 2nd November.
Get involved and send your entries to houseleader@wyvern.hants.sch.uk

Clubs fair

by Steph

This year Wyvern started a new annual event; the clubs fair is an opportunity to showcase the multitude of clubs at breaktime and after school. Ranging from sports clubs, drama clubs, music clubs and Pupils Press also made an appearance. It was a way to showcase all the extracurricular clubs we have to offer at wyvern to our newer students. We still have spaces available at the Pupils Press so if you want to feature on our magazine, you can come along after school on a Wednesday in IT2. Snacks are included and no pre- sign up is needed.

Warhammer

By Jack

One of the best hobbies in the world!!!!!!!

- Warhammer is a 3 step process
  1. you build the models
  2. you paint the models
  3. you play the models

1. The building

- Building models can be difficult [especially the smaller ones] . There are two ways to build them, gluing them together and less commonly push pin but either way it is very fun. My personal views about building is that you have to be VERY CAREFUL!!!!!

2. The painting

- To be honest, one of my least favourite parts of the process but one of the most important parts. It can get quite tedious at times especially on the smaller models. You need quite a lot of paints for one model.

3. The tabletop game

- My favourite part of Warhammer absolutely brilliant. It is a complicated game that is played with all the models you painted. There isn't really much else to say unless you come to play!

The good guys?

- Space marines:
  My personal favourite the space marines are super humans covered in bullet proof armour armed with giant pistols.
- The Imperium:
  From regular people to the emperor's personal guard don't really know much about them.
- The Xenos threat:
  From purple aliens that can be giant space cruisers to million year old robot skeletons that made a deal with a god.

Me and Warhammer

I do a certain type of space marines called the blood angels who are vampires thirsty for the blood of their enemies. They will rip friends and foes apart.

War Hammer Club is now on at Wyvern with Mrs Culverhouse - speak to her for more information.

Cryptid Sighting

By Badger

On a camp in South Wales one of the campers saw a tall white creature (around 8- 9ft) and told a student who is actually in this school. I interviewed him and got this information:
He said he only saw a glimpse of it but his friend said he saw a huge white possibly furry creature standing behind a container.
The container was around 7 ft and the creatures head was just over around 1 ft above so over all it was probably 8ft as the friend was staring it lent down and wasn't seen again. After this event the friend went and told the student (who knew a lot about cryptid types) and took him to the container and told him about what happened.
He investigated the site and saw a few broken branches and brambles but no other evidence.
I did some research and found out it could have been a type skinwalker standing on its back legs or some sort of white sasquatch
If you have had any freaky encounters please send them to the Pupils Press and maybe your description will be in the next issue!

Dungeons and Dragons!

By Lucas

The core of D&D is about storytelling. The group of players essentially tell a collective story, guiding heroes through dangerous quests to search for treasure, battle deadly foes, and even carry out daring rescues.

The adventure itself is only limited by the imagination of the players around the table.

Charlie and the Chocolate Factory Production Review_ by Ronnie

The first thing that I must say about my experience viewing the production was that as soon as I left, I checked the time on my phone and nearly three hours had passed, but it felt like only one. The show's pace was incredible, with each scene ending conclusively.

The jokes, the acting... everything about it was exactly what you would expect in a West End Broadway show.

I have since watched all three films (Willy Wonka's Chocolate Factory, Charlie and the Chocolate Factory, and Wonka) but none of them compared to the Wyvern production.

The production was almost indistinguishable from a professional London performance.

Everything about it screamed perfection. I especially loved how foreign accents were used to represent each character's nationality, and the way they portrayed Wonka to be a darker version than in the movies, possessing no regard for the children's' lives.

I would also like to mention our own, Finley Keats, who starred as Charlie's deceased father, and Steph Rainger, who played a reporter/market shopper. They played their parts gracefully, along with the rest of the cast.

Overall an incredible performance from the students of Wyvern College.

Supernatural sightings By Eva

1. The Tower of London, Anne Boleyn.

Location. London UK

The sightings:

One of the most frequently reported ghosts seen is Anne Boleyn, the second wife of King Henry VIII, who was executed in London 1-536. Witnesses have repeatedly reported seeing a headless figure walking round the grounds near Tower Green!

2. The Rendlesham Forest incident

Location; Suffolk, UK

The sighting:

Late December 1980, U.S. Air force personnel stationed at RAF bentwaters reported multiple strange, glowing metallic objects descending into the nearby Rendlesham forest. People investigated the sight finding burning trees, indentations in the ground and high radiation levels making it one of Britain's most credible UFO encounters.

3. The Calvine UFO photograph

Location; Perthshire, Scotland

The sighting:

On the 4th August 1990, two hikers were just enjoying a lovely walk on the moors spotted a massive diamond-shaped object hovering in the sky. The hikers took six colour photos of the diamond shaped item.

That is all!

Stalked by the Supernatural

Ronnie

Michael pivoted on one foot for a moment and turned to face Haley side-on, his pupils dilated. He walked swiftly towards her, and she backed away in fear.

She stared at him, and then the door. Could she make it? She wasn't sure. But in a flash, her brother stood over her, menacingly. He reached for her arm and slashed deep into the flesh. Haley winced in pain and glanced back towards the door.

Michael was about to slash at her again when, just as he raised his hand, she bolted across the room towards the open door. She slammed it shut behind her, and ran down the narrow stairs into the empty apartment lobby. Finally, she swung the main doors open and fled.

Around half an hour later, once Haley felt she was relatively safe and had stemmed the bleeding from the wound on her arm, she hunkered down in a nearby pub. She used her phone to book a flight from Gatwick Airport to Northern Ireland. She'd wanted somewhere further away, but her passport and belongings were back at the apartment.

She boarded the flight a short time later.

Over the next six months, Haley lived in Northern Ireland, working as a saleswoman and dating her co-worker, Marlo. Marlo was the kind of man who you'd never imagine getting into a fight, but he still took martial arts classes on weekends.

Haley's life continued somewhat peacefully, but she thought each day of Michael, and whether he was still out to get her. She felt as if someone was around every corner, or watching her from above, waiting for the right moment.

Marlo was with her whenever she left the house; she'd told him she suffered panic attacks. Little was Hayley aware, though, that on that awful night many months ago, her brother had followed the trail of blood from her arm. He'd watched her enter the pub, and he'd followed her to the airport...

A year into her relationship with Marlo, Haley came home in tears. Her manager, Lynn, had suffered a heart attack and died. Lynn was the person who'd persuaded the company to give Hayley the job. She was her best friend.

Marlo attempted to comfort Hayley, but it was no use. She informed him that the funeral would take place the following week at their local church.

On the day of the funeral, Hayley and Marlo arrived at the church an hour early. The funeral was hard for Marlo as well. He'd known Lynn for a few months longer than Haley had; they were originally part of the same office organisation.

After Lynn's coffin had been lowered into the ground and the ceremony was at its end, Haley and Marlo were readying to leave. Suddenly, out of the fireplace beyond the altar, smoke began furiously spewing out into the hall.

'That's strange,' Marlo said. 'There's no fire, just the smoke.'

He was correct. Haley stared more intently. Not a spark of orange was visible!

A second later, a dark shape stepped out of the fire: A man. The figure had slightly wavy hair, and then it smiled. More teeth. It was Michael.

Hayley grabbed Marlo and they both ran towards the door. After a few seconds, she looked back over her shoulder and, with horror, realised Michael was directly behind her.

As she turned to face forward, Marlo veered off to the right, and she realised she was heading straight for one of the stained-glass windows. With no way to stop herself, she crashed through it.

Searing pain shot through her as shards of glass pierced her skin. She fell, rolled, and ended up on her back in a patch of grass next to a path that led into the church's graveyard.

Desperately crawling along the ground now, she watched as Michael came closer...

She opened her eyes at the sound of grunting and screaming and looked up to see Marlo tackle Michael. With enough time to stand and run, Hayley headed into the graveyard.

She sprinted as fast as her tired, injured legs could carry her. She looked back as the grunting and fighting continued and saw Marlo gesture for her to run.

She took off again but span around at the sudden sound of a blood-curdling scream. Then silence... followed by a thud, as Marlo's body hit the ground. Hayley saw that his face had been torn off, exposing the skull beneath.

Check out next issue for the final installment from Ronnie!
